HTML is as EASY as COPY/PASTE

YOU TOO can build a WEBSITE!

Learn to code easy!

The Yesterweb began as an empty Discord server in February of 2021 and was created by Sadness. The server was intended to be a communication tool for the community at Neocities.org, a a place for likeminded folks to discuss building websites.

As we continued to grow, we attracted a diverse group of people with a range of knowledge, skills and hobbies who all care deeply about the internet. We have seen it shift and become what it is today. We're starting small, by researching and sharing, making art, creating digital spaces, and figuring out how to unlearn harmful social habits from social media.

We hope to inspire people to create their own spaces online.

The Yesterweb is run by volunteers who dedicate their time out of love and passion for the internet and other people ♥

We are always changing and growing.

You can drop by our Discord or reach out to us at contact@yesterweb.org

---

IT DOESN'T HAVE TO BE LIKE THIS

Social media is killing our web. Go to yesterweb.org to find out how you can save it.

You can join the movement and create your own website!

Join us on the indie web through these sites:

https://neocities.org/

https://yesterweb.org/

https://sadgrl.online/

And don't forget to search and learn about Webrings!

THE SMALL WEB IS KILLING SOCIAL MEDIA PROFITS!

VISIT
YESTERWEB.ORG
SO YOU CAN HELP

A BETTER INTERNET IS WITHIN REACH.

Learn more at Yesterweb.org

We want to figure out how to forge a path forward, toward cultivating a better internet.

These objectives change, grow and develop with the community.

1) To advocate for a no (or low) cost self-expressive and creative hobby (building websites).

2) To unlearn antisocial online communication techniques, and re-learn to develop meaningful connections with others

3) To expose the true objectives of the biggest social platforms and the full scope of their harm.

---

yesterweb

yesterweb

Zine

The Yesterweb is made up of people who've come together in recognition that something is wrong with the internet, a space that changed before our eyes.

We're people. Not a corporation or a "brand". We've watched regular people become second-class citizens on the web, demoted to 'users' by the biggest platforms. We are those people...